MRS. LEASE is on the stump for McKinley this year. It wasn't so four years ago, but bygones had best be bygones.

* * *

IT IS JUST worth noticing that while Croker has had Hill's picture removed from certain places he kindly refrains from hanging up his own in the vacancy thereby created.

* * *

A BISHOP declares that "David Harum" is full of rum, profanity and tobacco. If the critic had confined himself to the word stupidity he would have hit the mark better.

* * *

WHEN MR. CORBETT makes love to his own wife by cable he certainly does it regardless of expense, but perhaps with some fear that she will further expose him as a fakir.

* * *

VERSES sent us as original by one J. W. Bucy, entitled "The New Journalism" and printed some weeks ago, were stolen from Life, to which excellent contemporary we beg to credit them at this late date.

* * *

THE AMERICAN CLERGYMAN in Montreal who refused to pray for the queen deserved his discharge. One doesn't preach in Rome for the mere purpose of proclaiming his allegiance to President Krüger.

* * *

HOBSON intends no reflection on Dewey in the declaration that the Spaniards sank their own vessels in Manila bay. No one need think of such a thing. The sinking surely wouldn't have occurred if George hadn't been there, no matter who did it.

* * *

MARIE CORELLI says that Hall Caine prides himself on looking like the Saviour and likewise like Shakespeare. That is spiteful and malicious whether it is true or not; and as to that we shall never know, for Mr. Caine confesses, "You know I cannot reply to Miss Corelli."

* * *

THE FOOLISHNESS of some of the miners of the Cripple-creek locality is as bad as their barbarity, if that is possible; but it seems to suggest that silver is the paramount issue. Let us hope, however, that the mistaken partisans will pause before they degrade our politics to the level of an English election.

* * *

THE GREAT WEST furnishes the spectacle of the aged proprietor of a ranch chasing his daughter and a dude lover, with whom she has eloped, armed with the amplest forgiveness and a cheque for ten thousand dollars which he proposes to give them if they will kindly return. And this prosperity and the good heart and glad hand prevail from one end of the country to the other.

WHAT HE THOUGHT.

UNCLE SI (who has wandered into a private park)—"Jimminy crickets! this must be one of them air statuary grounds I've hearn about in divorce cases."

MR. CROKER AS A PREACHER.

SOME OF THE ADVICE given by Mr. Croker to young men is good; but we hope the young men will not go back to Mr. Croker's early days to find practical examples of the things they ought to do. Apparently there was no humanitarian to advise the gentleman in those far-off days, and thus it is the more generous in him to dispense wisdom and goodness now, particularly as he doesn't get a cent for it.

HE CANNOT LIE.

"PLATT IS A LIAR," says Mr. Croker, "and he knows it." Possibly Mr. Platt has exaggerated something at some time or other, but we feel sure he did it solely by accident. We do not believe he would purposely tell a lie; and it is doubtful if he would deceive anybody, whether by exaggeration, through his fertile imagination, or by the overt act of falsehood. Oh, let us have confidence in our fellow-men! Let us observe the amenities, ourselves. Let us say of Mr. Platt that all he needs to be a second or a third Washington is a little hatchet and a cherry-tree.

POLITICAL BARBARISM FORTY YEARS AGO.

THE BRYAN MOB in the Cripple-creek region that sought the humiliation, if not the life, of Governor Roosevelt had nothing but blood to show on their own skin and garments for their ruffianism. The reader may recall the account by Artemus Ward, at the beginning of the civil war, of a southern effort to "confisticate" his show. One man tried to confiscate the tiger, and the last seen of that man he was just ahead of the tiger, with a large part of his trousers in the mouth of the animal, and going as if he never meant to stop. "I guess they didn't confisticate him much," quaintly says Artemus of the tiger.

THE FATTED CALF.

"I am glad to get back the old Democrats who wandered away. If I had known so many were coming back I would have made arrangements to have had manufactured a large number of candy fatted calves to give to those who were returning, as evidence that the prodigal is welcome home."—W. J. Bryan.

THE RÔLE OF HOST, or papa, hardly belongs to this gentleman. As a Democrat of a few days' tenderness it is perhaps appropriate for him to dispense veal and the sweetmeats most appreciated by youth; but most of the prodigals have at heart such contempt for him that they wish none of his impudence or his generosity. The brass of the burglar who appropriates the house as well as the goods in it, and then invites the ousted family to come to his sumptuous fare, is that of this anarchist, this repudiator of debt, this depreciator of honest money, this scoffer at the highest court, who proposes to welcome the prodigal to his own home.

POPULISTIC THEFT AND IMPUDENCE.

MR. BRYAN is the candidate of the populists much more than of the Democrats, many of whom utterly repudiate him. "The radical notions of the populists, if ever carried into effect in this country," says William D. Hornblower, "would reduce popular government to a position where we should be the laughing-stock of the nations, and would produce a reaction in the minds of the voters which would carry us far in the direction of domestic imperialism, which I suppose will be conceded to be of vastly more moment to us and to our posterity than colonial imperialism. Indeed, the chief objection to colonial imperialism is its probable effect upon our domestic institutions." The spectacle of the populists under the Democratic banner is humiliating as well as dangerous. Only a few years ago they were the laughing-stock of the Democratic party as well as of people of common sense the world over. Nothing could be more impertinent than their assumption of a right to the name their acquirement of which was a theft and their use of which is the use of stolen property to which they can never acquire a pardonable right. It would be no worse for an organization of horse-thieves to steal the tents of a Methodist camp-meeting and occupy them in the name of the good people whom they had driven out of them.

THE PODUNK JAY.

'TIS very strange, and yet upon my word
This silly fellow thinks he is a bird!
He lives on hay-seed — everywhere he's found,
But in the country he does most abound.
And at the approach of winter (more 's the pity),
A flock of jays will migrate to the city.

THE NEXT QUESTION.

"IS THE game over?" asked Tenspot, when he saw Keedick returning from the base-ball park.

"Yes."

"Who won, our club or the umpire?"

AN ODIOUS COMPARISON.

Madge—"Isn't Miss Autumn aging rapidly?"

Marjorie—"Yes, indeed. She will soon have as many wrinkles as her French bull-dog."

PROSTRATE.

FIRST NEW-YORKER—"By the way, while I was over looking at the Paris show I forgot all about base-ball. What's the standing of the New York club now?"

SECOND NEW-YORKER—'Standing! They are lying down."

JUDGE'S FAVORITES.

LILLIAN BLAUVELT.

To hear thee sing, so joyously and sweetly,
Were boon enough, for just thy charming sake.
If thou art not alone and all-completely
Enshrined in raptures that thy song doth wake,
It is that memories lost, all wild and tender,
Rush back, and, listening to thy voice, surrender.

DEFINITIONS.

POKER — A certain uncertainty.

Nuisance—Some one else's fad.

Questions—Temptations to untruth.

Inspiration — What fools wait for.

Laughter—The best gift of the gods.

Wisdom — Knowing more than you tell.

Usurper — One who is in the place you want

Jealousy — A compliment paid to excellence.

Hindrance—That which makes success worth while.

Faith—Believing that people are better than they are.

Reward—The thing you don't get when you work for it.

Slang—A short cut to expression used by the lame and lazy.

King—The most useless and troublesome piece on the chess-board.

Mischief—That which it is easiest to do when you don't intend to.

Death—The only answer the universe offers to the riddle of existence.

Optimism—The certainty that the world will come right without our help.

Economy — A way of spending money without getting any fun out of it.

Banter—A means of saying unpardonable things without having them openly resented.

Argument —A means of convincing yourself that you know what you're talking about, and of convincing every one else that you don't.

MARGARET WENTWORTH.

THAT SETTLED "IT."

MATTIE —"Well, I have promised to marry him and that settles it."
GEORGE —"How can you refer to him as 'it'?"

THE LONG AND SHORT OF IT.

SHE'D climb up a mountain as gayly
As ever a bird took its flight;
She'd walk fifteen miles before mid-day,
And ten between mid-day and night.

She cultured a tan quite exquisite,
Grew freckles upon her fair nose;
She made half the country lads frantic
Who gazed on her tan-colored hose.

At biking she was a great hummer—
Her grip it was firm as a vice;
But now she don't shake in that manner,
Because mamma says it's not nice.

Ah, now she is languid and dainty!
'Tisn't proper to be stout and strong.
Last summer she was in short dresses,
This winter her dresses are long.

H. S. KELLER.

KNEW IT TOO LATE.

THE fair attendant at the stamp window of the Corpus Christi post-office wearily sighed. Then a smile wreathed her lips; the sort of smile that reminds you of a humming-bird hovering nigh honeysuckle.

"I'm to be reported again," she said; "yonder short man with the vandyke beard has a grievance."

"What have you done now?"

FARMER—"Say, this pose us farmers is allus taken that 'farmin' don't pay' beats a trust all holler fur scarin' off competition."

CONFUCIAN ANALECTS.

(From the Chinese.)

LIKE cypress-leaves and pine that come to stay,
Friendships there are that never fade away.
The man who up to forty years has grown
Is little worth if he is still unknown.

Where laws are good and equal in a place,
He who stays poor incurs deserved disgrace;
But when the government is full of blame,
To roll in wealth is certainly a shame.

Be not too liberal with your "musts" and "nays,"
For doubt may rise and your best thoughts displace;
Be chary also of too many "I's"—
For egotists are hardly ever wise.

Most men hold beauty very rare and dear,
But halt at virtue, which is more austere;
The first enslaves us by its loveliness,
And yet the last should not be thought of less.

Though the fine graces and great gifts of Chow *
Your person and your character endow,
The broom of justice sweeps them all aside
If they promote in you unholy pride.

JOEL BENTON.

* The name of the head of a much-venerated Chinese dynasty.

HIS LOSS.

"CONFOUND the infernal luck!" the able editor of the Pettyville Plaindealer was snorting, as a friend entered the office. "Gosh-hang the blankity-blanked demon that stole, borrowed, or made 'way with our electrotype of the late Pydia E. Linkham!"

"Aw, what's the difference?" questioned the visitor. "That worthy lady has been dead for several years, and"——

"The difference?" howled the angry scribe. "What in tophet and so-and-so are we going to use for a portrait of the dowager empress of China?"

IN TOPSYTURVYLAND.

DRUNKEN LAMP-POST—"Thish comes in handy sometimesh, I kin tell yer."

CONFUCIAN ANALECTS.

(From the Chinese.)

LIKE cypress-leaves and pine that come to stay,
Friendships there are that never fade away.
The man who up to forty years has grown
Is little worth if he is still unknown.

Where laws are good and equal in a place,
He who stays poor incurs deserved disgrace;
But when the government is full of blame,
To roll in wealth is certainly a shame.

Be not too liberal with your "musts" and "nays,"
For doubt may rise and your best thoughts displace;
Be chary also of too many "I's"—
For egotists are hardly ever wise.

Most men hold beauty very rare and dear,
But halt at virtue, which is more austere;
The first enslaves us by its loveliness,
And yet the last should not be thought of less.

Though the fine graces and great gifts of Chow *
Your person and your character endow,
The broom of justice sweeps them all aside
If they promote in you unholy pride.

JOEL BENTON.

* The name of the head of a much-venerated Chinese dynasty.

HIS LOSS.

"CONFOUND the infernal luck!" the able editor of the Pettyville Plaindealer was snorting, as a friend entered the office. "Gosh-hang the blankity-blanked demon that stole, borrowed, or made 'way with our electrotype of the late Pydia E. Linkham!"

"Aw, what's the difference?" questioned the visitor. "That worthy lady has been dead for several years, and"——

"The difference?" howled the angry scribe. "What in tophet and so-and-so are we going to use for a portrait of the dowager empress of China?"

The Sohmer piano is a wonderful instrument, and will undoubtedly take the lead throughout the musical world. Its principal qualities, which have so excited the admiration of musical people, are its strength, richness and fullness of tone, possessing a light action, delightfully flexible to the touch, suitable for either the concert-room or parlor. With these combined qualities its destiny to become the most popular instrument in the world is assured.

"Yes," he said, "I nearly made myself sick last night smoking a cigar." "But if you don't like the weed why did you smoke it?" he was asked. "Just to please Miss Dolly." "She likes the odor of a good cigar, I suppose?" "No; she detests it. But she does love dearly to reform young men by making them swear off, and I had to do something to get her to take an interest in me."—Chicago Post.

GRANDMA.

I wish my grandma 'd tell me why
She always sits straight up to nap.
Maybe she s fraid if she lies down
She'll muss her dainty new lace cap.

She is the best grandma, I know,
That ever lived in this wide world;
She never makes me wash my hands,
Nor scolds me when my hair 's not curled.

When she sits up so straight and sleeps
I guess sometimes she makes believe;
For once, when I climbed up for jam,
Grandma jes' caught me by my sleeve.

Then, sometimes when she's fast asleep,
I try to tease the dog or cat;
But grandma always wakes right up
And says, "Now, Tommy, don't do that."

And once I said a naughty word
When I got mad at Johnny Snow.
Well, grandma's specs dropped down an inch,
And then her face looked troubled so.

But when I'm good she sleeps away
Jes' like a little baby does,
And makes us all believe she is
The nicest grandma ever was.
